HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

When the blood is foul and thick in the spring, disorders of various kinds manifest themselves, such as a feeling of general debility, a sense of weakness a want of appetite, a languor and apathy, sometimes a weariness and lassitude. This condition, enervating and enfeebling, is wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes and enriches the blood, invigorates the nervous system, tones and strengthens the digestive organs, and imparts new life and energy to all the organs of the body. Try it.

"I have never found anything that hit my wants as Hood's Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

As a Vitalizer,

"I write most of the time in an office, and often get overworked. Not having time to give up, I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla as a vitalizer, and I am satisfied it has saved me from a fit of sickness several times. I take three bottles every spring, and find it pre-eminently superior as a spring tonic to anything I ever took. My boarding mistress says Hood's Sarsaparilla is a sure cure for sick headache, if sufferers give it a perfect trial." E. J. CHILSON, Somerville, Mass.

Superior on Fair Trial.

I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as the most reliable and best spring medicine. I had tried many others without good results, and consequently condemned all alike, until I gave Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial, when I was convinced it was superior to all others. Every spring I take three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and know nothing of that terrible languor so prevalent at that season of the year. I have just finished my first bottle for 1883, and already feel much improved. Mrs. J. M. CARTER, Boston.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom in such proportions as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the system. Its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood is so well balanced that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism that can be credited only by those who have seen the remarkable results that follow its use.

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best medicines we ever sold for purifying the blood and for spring debility, and do not hesitate to give it our unqualified recommendation." GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

"I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier in the market." L. J. CLEMENT, Warner, N. H.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who was troubled with sick headache and biliousness. She is now entirely free from them." HOMER B. NASH, Pittsfield, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. I can eat anything without that awful distress, and have a tremendous appetite." PARK PATTEN, Gardiner,

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by druggists. $1, six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

The spring influences develop in your wearied and exhausted system an unnatural loathing for food and cheer. You may be sure your blood is in a low condition and needs cleansing. Take a spring medicine now. Don't wait till your system is further reduced by spring weather, but get Hood's Sarsaparilla immediately.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sharpens the appetite, tones the stomach, invigorates the mind, and imparts new life and energy to all who take it.

A Lowell alderman says: "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw." Try it. One hundred doses, $1.

"If people want a medicine to go all through 'em and wake 'em up, tell 'em to take Hood's Sarsaparilla." FREEMAN N. BIXBY, Meredith Village, N. H.

Purify the Blood.

A prominent business man remarks: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything. I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window of Hood's Apothecary, and I got a bottle. After taking it a week, she had a rousing appetite. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

Remember this fact. You find in no other blood purifier or sarsaparilla the same combination of valuable medicinal agents as in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

That Tired Feeling.

There is no infirmity so oppressive and burdensome to the human mind as that tired feeling of which invalids complain on the approach of serious disorder. The depression and despondency of spirit attending all its stages are immeasurable. The lassitude, languor and debility peculiar to this condition are wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, invigorates the nervous system, and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a great blood medicine. I take it in the spring when I am weak and languid. It helps me more than anything else. For a low state of the blood nothing is better." Mrs. A. F. ATKINS, Lynn, Mass.

A lady tells us: "The first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good; her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure.

"I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for biliousness and all impurities of the blood. Last spring I was benefited by it." Mrs. J. W. CLEMENT, Franklin, N. H.

"I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best medicines for spring, when the blood is in a low condition and needs cleansing. I have been benefited by it." W. H. CURTIS, R. R. Agent, Haverill, Mass.

Take a spring medicine now. Try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the vitalizing effects of which render it the most effective spring medicine. No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5.00. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Associate Justice Parker, of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, is dangerously ill.

Charles Dudley Warner is to become editor of the Drawer in Harper's Monthly.

The Old Ladies' Home, in Taunton, Mass., has received private donations amounting to $1,000.

It is now announced that Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt will sail for Europe early next month, and that he will be accompanied by Mr. W. L. Scott.

Glass shingles are now being manufactured at Pittsburgh, which are said to be more durable and impervious to rain than slate or any other material.

Senator-elect Sabin, of Minnesota, believing that his duties at Washington will occupy all his time, has given up his large and profitable business at Stillwater.

Rev. Henry H. Michols, rector of St. Paul's Church at Brunswick, Me., has accepted a call to become assistant minister to Trinity Church, New Haven.

A New York coroner is investigating the circumstances attending the death of a child that was sold by a professional baby nurse to a woman who proposed to adopt it.

An effort is to be made at Ottawa, Canada, to train and harness the twin moose recently purchased by the Governor General. The Marquis will probably send them to the park at Windsor Castle.

A lady in Providence has among her elegant articles of bric-a-brac in her parlor, a large, carved wooden spoon with a wooden chain attached, hung by the side of the fireplace. This unique ornament is over two hundred years old.

There is a very shrewd man in Oregon. Some benevolent ladies contributed money to buy a stove for the poor widow and placed it in his hands. He made the purchase, but kept the new stove himself and gave the poor widow his old one.

Mr. H. A. W. Tabor, of Colorado, who will be remembered as a United States Senator during a few days of the last session, is reported to contemplate the building of a hotel in Denver. It will be the finest hostelry in the world, and exclusive of the furnishing, will cost more than $1,000,000.

Charles Rich, aged 55, of Lancaster, Pa., was instantly killed Tuesday by the falling of an elevator on which he was ascending to the fourth story of the county hospital. The coroner's investigation revealed the fact that the elevator rope had been cut by some persons unknown, with criminal intent.

An explosion of gas occurred in the cellar of the Palace Hotel at San Francisco, California, on Tuesday. When the fire department reached the scene a second explosion of greater violence blew out the sidewalk light and severely burned Engineer Ross, of the fire department, R. Chaplin, of the patrol, and seven others.

A series of kerosene explosions in Troy revealed the fact that the oil put upon the market and sold especially to the poor was not of the proper test. This experience may well serve as a warning to the people of other cities. Poor kerosene is always liable to explode, while good oil of the proper test would not explode even if the lamp fell on the floor.

English sportsmen are adopting paper houses in lieu of tents. Shooting boxes twelve feet square are easily transported, and being impervious to water are satisfactory from a sanitary point of view. These little cottages will be used at the seaside the coming summer, not only for bathing houses, but as residences by bachelors who desire seclusion.

Governor Foster, of Ohio, has not been at all well lately, but with his accustomed good nature, makes light of it. "I am suffering," he said to a reporter, "with chills and a severe cold; but don't report that, for I had my hair cut yesterday, and the boys would put this and that together, you know, and I would never hear the last of it."

An explosion of gas occurred in a sewer in the northeast part of Baltimore, Wednesday, which damaged the streets and sewer from $8,000 to $10,000. Houses in the immediate neighborhood were injured, several of them having their walls cracked and broken by the concussion. The explosion was caused by a boy throwing a burning match into the manhole of the sewer.

An interesting woman sails for Europe from New York, Wednesday. She is Mrs. MacGahan, widow of the celebrated war correspondent, J. A. MacGahan, who wore himself out in the service of others during the late war between Russia and Turkey. Mrs. MacGahan is a Russian lady, but has adopted this country as her home, because she wishes to bring up her bright little son as an American. She is an accomplished journalist, like her late husband, and acts as the correspondent in this country of the St. Petersburg Golos.

About fifty-two years ago four Italian boys came to this country. Soon after they separated, one finally returned to Europe, and one was drowned. The other two parted in Providence [illegible] their arrival in America, and lost all trace of each other. [illegible]

Bernard Barwick, a Prussian, has commenced a suit at New York against Rebecca McLean, claiming $10,000 for breach of promise of marriage.

A traveller in Florida writes: "On two occasions I have witnessed brakes whistled down and a train load of passengers stopped in the pine woods while the conductor slowly ambled to a neat cottage in a little orange grove and kissed his wife and a large family of children ranged along on top of the fence. I think it was his wife, but there was some speculation in regard to it. Animate and inanimate nature are alike affected. The leaves are too lazy to fall."

An examination of the financial management of Custer county, Montana, shows that the citizens have been bled pretty severely. Several thousand dollars were paid the County Clerk for work that could have done in a week. Contracts for the support of the county poor were given to the highest bidder at $12 per week. A contract for jail cells was awarded at $14,225, when other parties bid for the work at half these figures. As may be supposed, these revelations excite no little indignation in the plundered community.

Secretaries Clark and Alden, of the American Board, started for the East on the Servia from New York Wednesday. They hope to make a side trip to San Sebastian, in Spain, where a mission board is located, and will go thence directly to Constantinople, expecting to stop at Smyrna, Broosa and Nicomedia. They will probably be occupied a month or more in considering the affairs of the Western Turkey Mission, the annual meeting of which is to occur at Constantinople during their visit. Dr. Alden will return home early in July. Dr. Clark will remain another month to recruit his health.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The county tax has been assessed at $30,060, an amount some $1,000 in excess of the assessment of last year. Out of this the county debt will probably be reduced some $8,000 or $9,000.

Large numbers of horses are to be noticed in every freight train from Lewiston to Boston. The number of horses shipped to market from this section is larger than usual. The cattle train for Watertown passes through only on Mondays.

Aroostook.

The Times says: It now looks as though building operations would be brisk in Houlton the coming season. One new hotel, an opera house, two printing offices, and stores, and several residences are in contemplation.

The Cornet Band at Fort Fairfield is again resurrected and bids fair now to live. They meet for practice every week.

The house, barn and outbuildings of George L. Byron, of Linneus, were destroyed by fire on Monday night of this week. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Loss $1,600; insured for $700. The inmates of the house narrowly escaped with their lives. No furniture nor contents of the house were saved. Six cows and a flock of sheep were burned with the barn.

Public services to honor the memory of the late Rev. Isaiah Record, will be held in the Baptist church, Houlton, on Sunday evening, 15th inst. Services to commence at seven o'clock. Sermon by the Rev. A. C. Herrick, of Freeport.

Cumberland.

Theophilus Hopkins, the oil manufacturer, Portland, Saturday received a letter from some party in that city, enclosing $10, with the single word, in large black letters, "Conscience," accompanying the dash.

The steamer Mount Pleasant, of the Sebago Lake Line, was entirely burned at her wharf in Bridgton, Tuesday morning. The flames were not discovered until it was too late to save her. It is thought it was set on fire by an incendiary. The steamer was owned by Hon. Charles E. Gibbs. She was a comparatively new boat, having been built some three or four years ago. Her value is not definitely known, but the loss will probably be covered by insurance. A Bridgton despatch says the steamer was valued at $12,000, and insured in the Liverpool, London and Globe for $7,600. The steamer was on the ways for repairs.

The Press says an art exhibition is being held at Gorham.

Kate Stanley, who lives in Boston, while in an intoxicated condition, attempted suicide by shooting. It is thought the wound will not prove fatal. Kate is thirty-two years of age, and is said to be the native of Freeport, Me. Despondency caused by an unfortunate love affair with a man named Nugent, and subsequent hard drinking, are the causes assigned for the act.

Hancock.

A sad accident happened to Capt. Benjamin Spurling, of Cranberry Isles, in Portland, March 30. He had gone with his son, Capt. Frank Spurling, to fit for mackereling South, and in ballasting the new vessel, with pig and dross iron, a piece of iron flew and struck him in the eye and injured it so badly that it necessitated the removal of the ball from the socket. His condition was so much improved, Friday evening, that he thought of sailing with his son, this week, in the new schooner Emma.

Kennebec.

The Journal says there are perhaps three hundred laborers in Gardiner and vicinity waiting for the river to open, so that they can get work.

The Augusta Journal has information that there is not a large cut of logs on the Kennebec. Larger stocks are held on the Kennebec than usual this year, in consequence of so little being sawed last year on account of the drouth.

Lincoln.

Knight's grocery store at Wiscasset was entered by burglars Monday morning, robbed, and set on fire; but the fire was soon extinguished. Loss over $400. This is the fourth time this store has been broken into within a year. No clue to a burglar in either case.

Piscataquis.

A pair of valuable horses, belonging to Wm. Brown, of Bangor, said to be twins, dropped dead together on the road near Guilford, a few days ago. They had eaten hay from a field owned by T. D. Goodridge on which fox poison had been scattered. Mr. Goodridge offers to pay for the horses and is calling in the rest of the hay he had sold.

Another accident occurred in the Brownville match factory during the past week. Charlie Hobbs, of this place, had one hand caught and a finger badly crushed.

The Observer says: The oldest man in this county now, is said to be Thomas Pool, of Monson, father of Jesse and Zenas B. Pool, of Dover, who last month reached his 98th birthday. He resides with his nephew, Mr. Amos Knight, who kindly cares for him. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and draws a pension from the government. He retains his mental faculties remarkably well, remembers past and present events better than most men twenty years younger, and is quite hale and hearty.

Waldo.

Sheriff Wadsworth, of Belfast, recently received the sum of $1,300 arrears of pension, and in future will draw from the government the sum of $18 per month. [illegible] Wadsworth [illegible]

These farms were recently surveyed by W. D. Dana, Esq., for the State, from lands obtained by treaty with the Indians. The State holds jurisdiction over lands of nine hundred and ninety-nine years, and the disposition of them is really a lease for that period. Those who have the hardihood to attack the virgin forests, like the pioneers of one hundred years ago, will find in the sale of these lands an opportunity to purchase a farm at a small figure.

LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS.

[From the N. Y. Evening Post.]

Dress bonnets are of medium size.

The new foule cloth comes in all the rich street shades.

Stylishly dressed children now wear lace shoulder-capes instead of collars.

Heavy silks, woven in small matelasse patterns, will replace to some extent the plain ottomans of the past season.

Velvet will be worn to the latest possible moment, or until the heated term shall render it uncomfortable, as it retains, or rather has increased, its hold on popular favor.

Ladies who venture to adopt plaided costumes avoid the corsage made of the vari-colored material, and join to the plaided skirts a jersey bodice of a monochrome color matching exactly one of the shades of the plaid.

Fans of tinted ostrich feathers, mounted on tortoise shell are still the height of style for evening dress. They are oval in shape, and usually have a brilliantly plumaged bird or a cluster of lilies or roses set in the centre of the fan.

Yellow, in a score of tints, ranging from daffodil and primrose to citron yellow of a greenish tint, is a color that is now exceedingly fashionable in every sort of dress fabric, bonnet material, and garniture, and in house-adorning—in drapery, panellings, lambrequins, and curtains.

Lace bonnets in black and cream white, in modified poke shape, are among the attractive fancies in new French millinery. Lace pleatings are laid over the brims, which are first covered with colored silk or satin of either bright or pale shades. Flowers matching the hue of the silk foundation are wreathed around the crown or massed at one side, mingled usually with cascades of the lace.

The return to fashion of gros grains and failles has met with universal approbation. These handsome silks have a richness of effect quite beyond that obtainable by any surah or merveilleux, yet it is not to be supposed that these soft, clinging silks are by any means discarded; they are as much used as ever, but they are employed in a different manner, being used more as drapings, pleatings of every kind, and ruchings than for entire toilets.

Wood brown, several improved shades of terra-cotta and crushed strawberry, Presbyterian blue, intense, pale, and leaden looking greens, porphyry, shot with gold, are the leading shades in spring and summer costumes. For young ladies are new and exquisite shades of pink and mauve. White holds its own still, for, beautiful as some of the new tints undoubtedly are, nothing in all the range of colors can be made to look more attractive and artistic than white, with lace adornings.

Many leading modistes have discontinued the use of gored side breadths in their skirts; these, whether short or long, trimmed or plain, are now cut with one centre breadth; this is slightly sloped—curved, more properly speaking—at each side toward the top only. The breadth on each side is the same width at each end, but it is fitted to the figure at the waist by two pleats in each breadth. This, it is claimed, is an improvement, as it causes the skirt to sit straight, and neither go in points nor cling too closely to the figure.

Satin is, and will be, very popular. Black satin is certainly not so much favored for day wear, its place this season being taken by gros grain, which is infinitely preferable in sunlight, because devoid of any shiny appearance. For evening wear, however, black satin veiled with black lace will be very elegantly worn. There are also imported superb looking black satin toilets, cut in trained princesse style, made of the richest quality of Thre satin, with panier drapery about the hips and a slight drapery above the tournure in the back, taking away the objectionable robe de chambre effect a princesse dress otherwise has. This, with a garniture of magnificent jet-beaded applique bands on the corsage and sleeves, constitutes the sole trimming.

Among handsome new brocades are exhibited patterns of large nondescript flowers in solid white, with pale green foliage, on a background of small interlaced arabesques of scarlet and gold color. Another shows great sprays of pale pink and tea roses on a delicate silver gray satin background. The most notable of all these brocades is a design in chaudron, or copper colored satin, with large raised arabesques of foliage in exquisitely shaded tones of chaudron down each side of the breadth, while up the centre of the silk are brocaded clusters of carnations in their natural hues. This silk is literally as "thick as a board," and costs thirty dollars a yard. This fabric is particularly adapted to regal toilets made with court train, and would appropriately adorn a stately matron treading with grace and dignity the figures of the minuet.

It is told by modistes returning from abroad, that among other vagaries of fashion in the gay French capital, bonnets and hats are now selected with a view to silently demonstrating the role the various wearers desire to enact before the world. One style of hat—a "perfect love"—tilted over the eyes, and crowned with blush-roses, is intended to be expressive of sweet naivete; another, adorned with delicately-tinted touch-me-nots and tender white lilies of the valley, characterizes the wearer as of a gentle, clinging disposition; while formidable and atrocious looking bonnets, adorned with owls looking wise, eagles looking fierce, and daggers, swords and jewel-headed spears, are assumed by women who openly repudiate the tradition of weakness, and desire to demonstrate by a self reliant demeanor their assumption of the free rights of women, so far as social customs and restrictive public opinion have surrendered to the claims for emancipation which they periodically clamor for.

Plaid materials are certainly in high vogue; but in one particular they resemble the Bagdad, Paisley, and other shawls not many years ago so fashionable. They require the shoulders and the grace of a Frenchwoman to wear them either with aplomb or distinction. Still, the fashion for these materials is likely to continue throughout the summer, as many of the new patterned satins and other warm-weather fabrics are made with plaids, many of which are of a very pronounced type and consequently very ugly. But under the name of "zephyrs" are just imported some airy looking plaids and checks designed for mid-summer use, which are certainly the prettiest and least objectionable of all the tartans yet exhibited. These come in what are termed "gingham" effects, and among them are [illegible] pale blue and wood brown [illegible] lines of cardinal [illegible]

Dresses made of this material are to be flounced two-thirds up the length of the skirt with a short tunic shirred or pleated to a pointed bodice, the joining to be hidden by wide bands of ribbon brought from the sides of the bodice and tied, with long flowing ends falling over the skirt in front. The ribbons reproduce the tints of the colors of the zephyr fabric composing the dress.

China silks are revived and promise to be in great demand. The new patterns are most artistic and picturesque, being similar in style to the Pompadour sateens, only softer and richer looking. Large flowers of delicate tints are strewn rather far apart on grounds of soft texture and color, the edges of the flowers shading off into the groundwork. The silks are made in all the shades imaginable, faint colors being, in the majority—such as soft-tinted willow green, salmon pink, creamish hues with a dash of yellow in them, and hedge-rose pink, shading into a silver sheen. There are also many chine silks with rich, dark backgrounds. One of the great attractions in many people's eyes is, next to their inexpensiveness, their washing qualities, which are said to be unlimited. These fabrics are most especially appropriate for garden parties. Arrayed in a chine silk costume adorned with lace, and wearing one of the flapping Maude Muller Leghorn hats crowned with roses, and adding as a finish a pair of long buttonless Suede Saxe gloves, a girl may look as pretty and picturesque as Dolly Varden herself at an incredibly small expense. This picture is anticipating the summer before the spring is well here, and most likely before chine silks and straw hats are in order we shall have to return to seal jackets and fur garments. Yet it is well to look ahead a bit, and with all the simple, yet beautiful and inexpensive dress fabrics, lovely-hued ribbons of rich texture at marvellously low prices, dainty laces to be had for a song, exquisitely-made flowers and foliage, mosses, and buds rivalling nature's own in coloring, form, and price—with all these accessories at her hand, a girl in these days is surely either devoid of inclination to look well, or taste to do so, who does not appear something more than a commonplace being. She cannot help beholding the possibilities of improvement with the store windows resplendent in treasures beyond compare, holding out temptations and suggestions as to color and style, and above all, offering real genuine bona-fide bargains in fabrics and fancies, beautiful and tempting enough to inveigle a nun or an anchorite into a purchase.

AN INDICTMENT OF DISHONEST JOURNALISM

[Portland Press.]

The Hon. B. W. Harris, of Massachusetts, has retired from Congress, having earned the reputation due to a faithful public servant. His constituents gave him a warm welcome home, and in responding to the welcome he said things that will bear wide quotation. Among them are caustic comments upon some Washington correspondents and other representatives of the so-called metropolitan journals—comments that, we regret to say, are as truthful as severe. In the course of his speech Mr. Harris made use of the following words:

The dangers attending life in Congress are many. The purest motives may be misunderstood and grossly misrepresented—the bravest act and the most unselfish and patriotic vote may be made to appear to be dictated by cowardice or corruption. The public ear is constantly filled with rumors about the corrupt lobby which infest the capitol and control Congress. I am of opinion that fewer members of Congress are corrupted by the lobby than we are accustomed to believe. The lobby works its will by far different methods than by open bribery of members. Public opinion, or what for the time seems to be public opinion, often controls the action of men, even against their better judgments. To manufacture public opinion in the interests of speculation and jobs is the modern office of the lobby to a large extent. It not unfrequently happens, I think, that the men who control great and influential newspapers are the men who become recipients of the bounties of the lobby. So popular has this method of shaping public thought become that the most gigantic swindlers become the owners or controlling spirits of great public journals. I venture to express the opinion that no corrupt lobby was ever organized which did not contain its fair share of active and influential and unscrupulous members of the press.

The member of Congress who honestly and bravely resists these influences is very likely to fall beneath the lash of the organs of the lobby. Some hired agent of the lobby who sits in the reporters' gallery as a representative of the press may stab the character of any man too honest to yield to the demands of the corruptionists. It may not unfrequently be heard as the boasts of merest striplings of the press that by their art they make and mar at will the fortunes of Congressmen. It will be well therefore, for the people if they will receive with caution, and even something of distrust, the flippant newspaper criticisms of public servants. No public man with decent self respect can reply to or publicly refute the pregnant innuendoes and half attired slanders of the sensational press of the country. To notice them at all is but to invite fresh attack.

Commenting upon these utterances which however truthful they are, require courage to voice, an exchange speaks thus: The evil to which Mr. Harris refers is grave enough to awaken the alarm of every thoughtful citizen, irrespective of partisan predilections. The lobby understands that it can make its way with much less difficulty through the complicity of the newspaper, than through the venality of the Congressman. The Tweed ring carried on its crusade of wild peculation in New York for years by buying the silence of the press. When only one newspaper did at last refuse its largesses, it was speedily overthrown. The people are all the time in danger of being grossly deceived in respect of the character of public men, through the wilful misrepresentations of the penny-a-liners who swarm in the Capital. They defame good men and extol bad ones, precisely as the order they are called upon to fill specifies. The consequence is, that some very poor specimens of humanity pass for paragons of perfection, and others, who are without blemish, are pictured as veritable monsters of iniquity.

These modest gentlemen of the quill insist upon running the Government, if they are permitted to do so, everything is shown up in a rosy light, if they are thwarted, they take the same sort of revenge the Philadelphia fish women are supposed to take who bespatter those who look at their fish and won't buy. When they have their way, jobbery runs riot and nothing is said about it. When they are slighted and snubbed, there is nothing like as much crookedness, because it cannot flourish unless they are in it, but there is a vast deal more clamor, for they are ferocious when they "get left." If we could have an honest press, this would be the best-governed country in the world. In all other particulars it is infinitely superior to any in the universe ? The besom of reform will begin a grand and necessary work when it is directed, as it inevitably must be, sooner or later, to the elevation and purification of our newspaper literature.

A story of reconciliation between the Astor and Vanderbilt families in connection with the late ball is told by the New York Journal. Miss Carrie Astor is said to have been very anxious to take part in the gayety, and prevailed upon her mother to call at the Vanderbilt mansion, where she had never before visited. Then Mrs. Vanderbilt accepted an invitation to dine at Mrs. Astor's, and a card of the great ball followed as a matter of course, so now the elevation of the Vanderbilts to the exclusive Knickerbocker place of society is the prominent topic of conversation in fashionable circles.

The Chicago Railway Age has compiled a statement of railroad construction for the first quarter of 1883, showing that the latter part of the winter was extremely unfavorable to road building on account of the severity of the weather. Heavy snow-storms, floods and the flurry in the iron trade caused the timid to hold off. Reports are to the effect that the construction of main track for that time is 766 miles, against 1,200 miles for the corresponding period in 1882, when the weather was very mild and all conditions were favorable. The mileage for the year is estimated at 8 000 miles. Among the States showing the largest increase in mileage are the following. New York, 114, Arkansas, 91, Arizona, 63; Pennsylvania, 73, Montana, 43, Florida, 43; Missouri, 40, and Illinois 37.

It is rumored in court circles in England that Queen Victoria has selected as the bride of her grandson, the eldest son of the Prince and Princess of Wales, now a lad of 19, the Princess Clementine of Saxe-Coburg, daughter of the King and Queen of the Belgians and niece of the unfortunate ex-Empress Carlotta of Mexico.

A baby camel was born at Central Park last Saturday night. It is described as "about as large as a colt, principally legs that are apparently very much in their own way and so ugly that if it ever catches sight of itself it will go off in a dark corner and die."

RARE TAPESTRIES.

An exchange says, "The city of Paris owns a series of tapestries of different degrees of antiquity which rivals in value the celebrated collection of the Garde Meuble. Lately the 'prefectoral administration' made an examination into these tapestries, and they were found to be for the most part in very bad condition. Some have lost their margins and with them the names of their makers and designers—a great loss. Others have been used as banners or otherwise where the wind has used them roughly. Still others have been half ruined by ignorant and unskilful restorers. The prefect of the Seine has asked for a credit in order that these interesting relics shall be saved from entire destruction, and the work has been intrusted to the firm of Leger, who restored the tapestries shown at the decorative art exhibition. About $1,000 will be spent on careful photographs, to be kept in case of destruction or theft. The firm of Leger charges about $10,000 for repairing, and the collection when restored will be placed in a special room of the new Hotel de Ville. Some idea of the importance of the tapestries may be gained from the valuation. They are 98 in number and are held to be worth on the average about $5 200 apiece. The exact sum in dollars is not less than $507,623 50."

REV W. H. H. MURRAY

IN NEW YORK—HE CONTRADICTS THE STORIES OF HIS FLIGHT FROM TEXAS.

[Special despatch to the Boston Journal.]

NEW YORK, April 6. The Rev. W. H. H. Murray is at the Astor House. In conversation with a Tribune reporter, he denied the truth of the story sent by telegraph that he had fled from Texas to escape his creditors. He says he left publicly, buying a railway ticket in San Antonio, and coming straight to New York by rail. He saw no lady with whom he was acquainted on the entire trip. He comes North, he says, to look after his literary business matters, and get depositions to be used in the suit against George F. Field, one of his partners in a lumber business in Texas. Mr. Murray ascribes to Field the origin of the last attack upon him. He says that Field agreed to put $9 000 in the business, and put in only $1,100. Field then brought suit against Murray and his other partners on a small claim, attached the property of the company, and stopped the business. Mr. Murray says Field thought they wouldn't fight, but the case was taken to the United States Court in San Antonio. He denies that he owes more than five hundred dollars to anybody in Texas, and says that the partnership owes nothing. Mr. Murray intends to remain interested in Texas matters, and is preparing to publish a book on Texas.

The contortions of the Maryland Democracy in its efforts to harmonize are wonderful to behold. Every boss in the State has a plan of his own which he is sure will cause a general hand-shaking all around, but when analyzed the plan is found to have been devised wholly in the interest of its author. The party organs are shrieking with all their might and begging every one to stop quarrelling and so save the State from passing into the hands of the Republicans. The young Democracy has decided to try and put a stop to the scrimmage and for that purpose has formed an association all the members of which are pledged to support good government. But as no one but a Democrat is allowed to join, the probability of the members living up to the pledge is rather slim. The canvass for the Governorship is certain to be a lively one and its bearings upon the election of the next United States Senator lend it additional importance.

A successor to Mr. Kenna, who resigned in order to accept the Senatorship, is soon to be elected in the IIId Congressional District of West Virginia. Both parties have their candidates in the field, the Republicans having nominated Judge Brown and the Democrats C. Philip Snyder. The district is naturally Democratic, Mr. Kenna having been re-elected last fall by about 3,000 majority. The Republicans, however, propose to make a gallant fight, and have named a popular man to lead them.

Rumors were current in Washington Thursday morning, that ex Governor Boutwell, of Massachusetts was dead. An inquiry showed that at two o'clock that afternoon Mr. Boutwell was presiding at a meeting, in New York, of the Mutual Trust Company, of which he is the Vice-President.

The Chicago Inter Ocean heads its report of the city election: "A Sinful Scoop—An Unusually Large Vote, Open Saloons, Cheap Lodging house Repeaters, Backed by the Gamblers' Gangs, the Most Marked Features of the Day." Editorially it says:

A more marked triumph of what are regarded as the vicious classes in society has seldom been achieved in any American city. All the causes that led to this triumph do not appear on the surface, and this is no time to analyze them. Not all who voted for Harrison were vicious, but many, mislead as to the real issues, were induced to join hands with the gamblers and thugs and dance-house and brothel keepers to continue Harrison in power, while they despised the company in which they were training.

The Mayor's apologists rely on the argument that he "might have done worse," and seem to think of abusing his critics easier than justifying his action. We should be glad to have evidence that we have been misinformed in relation to his police appointments, but unless that information can be contradicted, his action will not gain him credit among order loving citizens of any party.

NEW BOOK.

We have received from the publishers James R. Osgood & Co., Boston:

THE GENTLE SAVAGE, by Edward King. This is a new departure in novels. The plot is laid in France and Switzerland, but the principal characters are American. This is much like many recent novels, but in no other way does a similarity exist. The hero is an educated Cherokee who meets with many strange adventures in Europe while attempting to defeat the plans of a railway company who propose invading the Indian Territory. The original idea of placing this naturally refined but wholly unconventional Indian in the midst of an artificial society, the wealth of scenery, character and incident, as well as the strong individuality of the half-dozen principal personages, are the chief merits of the book. The descriptive parts are extremely good and one's interest is kept up throughout the story.

THE Admiration OF THE WORLD.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's WORLD'S Hair Restorer IS PERFECTION!

Public Benefactress. MRS. S. A. ALLEN has justly earned this title, and thousands are this day rejoicing over a fine head of hair produced by her unequaled preparation for restoring, invigorating and beautifying the Hair. Her World's Hair Restorer quickly cleanses the scalp, removing Dandruff, and arrests the fall; the hair if gray is changed to its natural color, giving it the same vitality and luxurious quantity as in youth.

COMPLIMENTARY "My hair is now restored to its youthful color, I have not a gray hair left. I am satisfied that the preparation is not a dye, but acts on the secretions. My hair ceases to fall, which is certainly an advantage to me, who was in danger of becoming bald." This is the testimony of all who use Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER.

"One Bottle did it." That is the expression of many who have had their gray hair restored to its natural color, and their bald spot covered with hair, after using one bottle of MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. It is not a dye.

Sir Walter Scott.

Sir Walter Scott was not only a versatile, prolific and interesting writer, but he was a sensible business man. He left the legacy of his genius to all mankind, but he left to his family, among other practical remembrances, life insurance in Scotch companies to the extent of one hundred thousand dollars.—Ins. Exchange.

This he did upon the old plan of life insurance. The CONNECTICUT MUTUAL LIFE INS. CO. now issue a life policy with the cash value printed into the policy, upon a 5 per cent reserve, thus offering the most perfect contract ever known in life insurance.

THE DYNAMITE PRISONERS.

All Remanded Without Bail.

LONDON, April 6. Henry Dalton, who was arrested at the American Exchange yesterday in connection with the dynamite plots, reached England some time in February. In appearance he was unassuming. Wm Doveton Smith, a prominent counselor, will defend Norman in the Bow street court. It is understood that he will base the defence on the plea that Norman was an innocent agent and that he was employed in the capacity of clerk for a limited time by a man from the United States, who has not yet been arrested. It will be held that Norman was in entire ignorance of the fact that the box contained a terrible explosive. No arrests have been made in London except the four reported yesterday.

Held Without Bail.

The dynamite prisoners were arraigned at Bow street to-day. The detectives gave a full history of their chase after Norman and gave a number of points which, in their opinion, pointed to his guilt and the intimate relations between him and other prisoners. It transpired that the name of the man whom Norman alleges engaged him as a clerk is Fletcher. The detectives deposed that on Norman's person was found a telegram signed Fletcher. All were remanded without bail.

Later Particulars.

The evidence was direct and circumstantial, coming almost entirely from detectives. They deposed that they had followed Norman from the dynamite factory at Birmingham to the hotel where he put up in this city. They dogged him when he went out Wednesday evening and that they finally arrested him late that evening. When they arrested him he declared he had no idea what the box contained. They found in his pocket; however, keys which fitted the box exactly. They also found on him a five pound note with a stamp "New York, March 10," imprinted on it.

Among other articles taken from him was a map of London, and an envelope addressed to "Gallagher," American Exchange. They confessed, however, that he had in his pocket a telegram directing him to call on Fletcher at the Charing Cross Hotel. Fletcher is the person who, according to Norman's claims, engaged him to carry the dynamite box that was taken from him.

In regard to the arrest of Wilson and Gallagher, the evidence of the police who affected their arrest, was no less straightforward. They deposed that when they inquired of Wilson what he had in his portmanteau he replied, "You had better look." They examined it and found a rubber bag containing liquids as already described. Gallagher denied any knowledge of these bags or their contents.

Although Gallagher was arrested in Nelson Square he gave his address as Charing Cross Hotel. The police stated further, that they found at Gallagher's room more rubber bags like those in his satchel, besides a quantity of money and a letter of credit good for £600, dated New York March 13th.

In respect to the arrest of Dalton alias O'Connor, the police testified that he had refused to give any address except Bowles' Reading Rooms, No 14 Edward Place, Culham Road. He was, however, searched by them and some pieces of fuse and a thermometer were found. The police continued that they had learned the whereabouts of Dalton and his lodging house as they had shadowed him to that address. They found upon him a diary which contained a recipe for the manufacture of fulminate of mercury, and other chemical compounds. Dalton here reiterated his denial, which he has already vouchsafed several times, that he had not the slightest acquaintance with the other prisoners.

The Interest

in nitro glycerine discoveries continues to grow and the excitement is intense. The papers are making the most of their opportunity and are selling frequent editions with the heading, "Plot to blow up London." The contents of editorials and local news seek to connect the arrest of the four dynamite prisoners with the advice given by O'Donovan Rossa to the Irishmen, to burn up everything English except their coal.

Guarding the Prisoners.

Additional precautions have been taken to guard the Bow street prison and the prisoners Norman, Gallagher, Wilson and Dalton, who are confined in that place now are carefully watched. When arraigned each one was accompanied by a policeman, who took a station behind the dock.

A Big Plot.

GLASGOW, April 6. The statement is made here that the recent arrests at Liverpool have furnished the police with a clue to the cause of the recent explosion in Glasgow. According to the latest information on the subject it was intended that the explosions should be on a magnificent scale. The plot included the destruction of Dover castle. They were only partially successful however. Several detectives have started from here for Liverpool to work out the evidence.

The Powder Explosion.

ROME, April 6. The explosion of powder at the depot, reported last night, occurred at Moricone, a small village just out of Passo Corese. Two hundred weight of powder was stored there (to be used in constructing an aqueduct) in the cellar of a tenement house in which 60 workmen had quarters. One of them, having occasion to go into the cellar, lighted a match to aid him in finding his way in the dark and when it burned out threw down the stub with its little spark. Instantly there was a terrific explosion and the whole house was blown into the air. The concussion broke all the windows in the neighborhood and only a few persons in the house at the time escaped with their lives. All were badly damaged.

American Detectives

LONDON, April 6. It was reported yesterday evening that the government of Great Britain had asked the American government to send a force of skilled detectives to assist in tracking the dynamite [illegible].

FEARS OF ANOTHER FLOOD.

The River at New Orleans Rising.

NEW ORLEANS, April 6. The river here is one inch higher than last year, causing apprehensions for the safety of the levees. It is raining to-night.

Bridges Carried Away.

JACKSON, Miss., April 6. The heaviest rain of the year fell here to-day. Bridges in many parts of the city were swept away. The water is very high.

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 6. A heavy rain here to-day. Many bridges were washed away and much damage done to boats.

FIRE IN A HOTEL.

Loss About $175,000.

BOSTON, April 6. Hotel Berkeley, a family hotel situated on the corner of Boylston and Berkeley streets, took fire this afternoon. The sixth floor and mansard roof were badly damaged by fire and the rest of the building, together with the elegant furnishings, was thoroughly soaked. Loss on building $10,000. The loss to occupants will swell the total damage to $75,000, which is believed to be wholly covered by insurance, which is distributed in thirty or forty companies.

Later.

It is now stated, based upon interviews with parties living in the Hotel Berkeley that the loss, including everything, will reach $175,000, being principally upon the elegant furniture and rich carpetings. Seventy-five families lose from $1,000 to $5,000 each. The losses were entirely covered by insurance.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIVE YEARS OLD.

Death of the Oldest Person in New Hampshire.

MANCHESTER, April 6. Aunt Polly Hatch died here to-day at the Ladies Aid Hospital. Her age was 105 years. She was the oldest person in New Hampshire and probably in New England. She was a native of Laconia, N. H.

The Journal says there are perhaps three hundred laborers in Gardiner and vicinity waiting for the river to open, so that they can get work.

General News.

The Star Route Trial.

WASHINGTON, April 6. In the Star Route trial to-day at the conclusion of the direct examination of John Dorsey he was cross-examined by Merrick. Witness was pressed to account for two different affidavits on one route. He acknowledged having sworn to them, but supposed it was straight, square work.

Merrick—It is swear work certainly.

He then bluntly asked the witness which of the conflicting affidavits was a lie. Witness was not allowed to repeat Rerdell's statement to him in regard to that matter, but managed to get in an explanation to the effect that one affidavit was intended to correct an error contained in another.

The prosecution read in evidence a letter from witness to Rerdell, dated Baltimore, Dec. 9, 1882. Dorsey begins by referring to a conversation he had with Rerdell and says that upon mature consideration he has come to the conclusion that there was more in his remark that "he would like an immediate trial," than he at first supposed, and that there was something beneath the surface. He begins to suspect that Rerdell is not acting in good faith and he warns him that if he even hears of his doing anything calculated to injure the defendants in this trial, he (John Dorsey) will prosecute him for another crime that he will not now mention. He concludes with the assertion that he can put his hand upon proofs of the acts, day and dates.

Witness said that he wrote that letter entirely on his own responsibility, independently of S. W. Dorsey's direction.

The cross-examination closed and Ingersoll began the redirect examination with a request for an explanation of the letter to Rerdell. Witness said that at the beginning of the trial a motion for continuance had been signed by all of the defendants with the exception of Rerdell. In the course of conversation with Rerdell, Rerdell said he supposed the witness thought he should have signed that motion, but he could not conscientiously do it. He had antagonized the Court at the beginning of the first trial and had no desire to repeat the experiment. His business had been damaged and he had been broken up.

Merrick cut off the explanation with an objection and an argument ensued. Witness remarked that he might have finished his explanation in less time than the argument had consumed. Ingersoll explained that it was the witness' intention to show that he had been convinced of Rerdell's treachery at that time. The Court, however, refused to permit the inquiry and to admit an explanation of the forgery above mentioned. The testimony of the witness closed with a denial of any evil intentions in making the affidavit connected with the routes. Adjourned till Monday.

Death of ex-Surgeon General Barnes.

General Joseph K Barnes, late Surgeon General of the United States Army, retired, died here Thursday from Bright's disease of the kidneys, after an illness of 8 months. For the last two months he had been confined to his bed. Gen. Barnes was appointed to the army as an assistant surgeon from Pennsylvania in 1840. He was promoted to be captain after the Mexican war. In 1856 he was made a major and surgeon. At the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion he was assigned to active duty in connection with the Army of the Potomac and received promotion in 1863 to be Medical Inspector General. He was appointed Brigadier General in 1864 and in 1865 was made brevet. This was against General Barnes' wish and he claimed that he was capable of doing duty for many years, and he desired to retain his full rank and pay. His funeral will be conducted with military honors, the General of the Army having issued instructions to that effect to the proper officers. The pall bearers will be the following: Generals Sherman, Schriver, Rucker, Dennery, Baird, Meigs, Drum, McFeely, Brown, Crane, Wilcox and Joseph E. Johnston.

The Jeannette Court of Inquiry.

The Jeannette Court of Inquiry met this morning, and Fireman Bartlett was examined. He stated that he never heard De Long speak an unkind word to Collins. He (Collins) was treated with the same consideration shown all the officers. Did not hear Collins state that he was prevented from saving his papers when the Jeannette was abandoned. Witness knew of no trouble between Melville and Collins. Thought the party moved as soon as practicable. Witness was present when Collins' body was found. The articles taken from the body were a small note book and a few packages of written matter like notes, some beads, nails, cartridges, a purse and pocket handkerchief. Witness thought everything possible was done to rescue DeLong's party. Witness did not know that anything belonging to Collins was destroyed or concealed. Court then adjourned till to-morrow.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

Excitement in Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, Mass., April 6. Considerable excitement was occasioned here this morning by the appearance of a gang of 150 employes of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, who at once began tearing up Canal street and laying ties and tracks thereon. Their coming was entirely unexpected.

The railroad men were very reticent but it is understood that a track will be laid to Union street, connecting with the horse railroad tracks, thus affording an uninterrupted passage for Boston and Lowell freight to all the mill corporations in the city. This, it is understood will operate to the detriment of the Boston & Maine road which has, weekly large consignments to the mills, and controls the tracks running along the mill fronts, but not on the streets. The Mayor and Board of Aldermen meet this afternoon to discuss the situation. It is understood that the Supreme Court will be appealed to for an injunction to restrain the Boston & Lowell from further progress in this direction. Prominent citizens connected with both railroads state that had not the Boston & Lowell Railroad commenced operations during the night, the Boston & Maine intended to lay a special track through the street to-day.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held this afternoon to consider the sudden invasion. Col. George appeared for the railroad, stating that it was the intention of the road to extend freight facilities here and they had the permission of the abutters on the street, viz., the Essex Company, Pacific, Atlantic, Washington and Pemberton Corporations, to use the street as a railroad thoroughfare. As it is not a public way the Aldermen did not oppose the operations of the road, but voted to post signs designating the way as dangerous. A new track is now laid to the Pacific storehouse on Canal street and will be extended to the Union before the close of the week.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Methodist Conference.

BOSTON, April 6. The session of the New England Methodist Conference began this morning with devotional exercises lasting half an hour. Bishop Bowman took the chair at nine o'clock, when the names of the effective elders of the North Boston District were read and characters passed. Rev. Dr. Thayer, presiding elder of Lynn District, gave a very favorable report of the work in that district. On motion of Dr. Thayer it was unanimously voted that the Bishop be requested to grant Dr. Bueller a year's leave of absence from his labors as missionary in India. Dr. Bueller responded feelingly and reviewed his work in the ministerial field for the past 44 years. Mrs. Bueller also made a brief address.

Rev. Geo. F. Eaton, of the committee on nominations, nominated officers for the different church organizations for the year and the report was adopted. Rev. Nathaniel Fellows, presiding elder of the Springfield District, represented the work in his district as having been eminently successful during the past year. He spoke of the great prosperity of Wilbraham Academy, and of the prospects of securing for this institution the needed $100,000 endowment. The names of the effective elders in this district were called by the Bishop and characters passed. The names of the supernumerary preachers were called and characters passed.

An appointment was asked for James Scott, as Chaplain of [illegible] Hampden county house of correction. The following were elected to elders' orders: John D. [illegible], Phineas C. [illegible], [illegible] and Alfred Woods. The following were elected to deacons' orders: [illegible] W. F. [illegible] and W. F. Cook. [illegible]

[illegible] committee was called for. Rogers was reported as unsettled on an article in the Apostles' creed, the resurrection of bodies, and his case was referred to a committee of five to report to-morrow. The usual announcements were made and the conference adjourned.

Arrested for Larceny.

BOSTON, April 6. Harry J. Blair was arrested to-night on a charge of larceny, of the power of attorney, representing about $20,000 which Blair had abstracted from paper belonging to David Leavitt, engineer of the Monarch Mining and Milling Company, of New Mexico. Blair endeavored to obtain the money by collusion with another clerk, but the latter informed the police of the matter.

Both Hemispheres joined hands in manifesting respect and homage to the mortal remains of the late Geo. Peabody, the illustrious philanthropist. England and America conjointly provided a fleet of ships to escort his body across the Atlantic. It is not saying too much to affirm that no monarch or potentate was ever laid to rest with equal pomp and circumstance. His memory will always be revered. This can be truthfully said also of Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator, the only remedy ever discovered for all heart troubles. As a certain specific it will always be cherished. Your druggist has it.

THE FARMINGTON NORMAL SCHOOL. The committee appointed by the Trustees of the Farmington Normal School to adjust the trouble at the institution, arising from certain charges against the principal, met in Farmington, Thursday evening. The principal, his counsel, T. W. Vose, Esq., of this city, and all the assistants of the school came before the committee. Mr. [illegible] said that charges had been made against him which ought to be immediately investigated. If they were true, he (Mr. Rounds) should not remain a moment longer in charge of the School. If they were untrue (as he claimed they were) then he asked that the School should be relieved from an unjust odium. The committee, in reply, said that they had no authority from the Trustees to investigate the charges, and that their sole mission was to arrange for the completion of the present term, so that the school might go on while the charges were being investigated. After a further conference it was agreed that the School should go on under present management through the present term—all co-operating harmoniously. [illegible]

There was quite a lively contest on the election of assignee and it resulted in no choice. After the voting the Judge declared there was no election and an adjournment was made till next Wednesday, at the same place, when the Judge will announce his appointment.

THE WOODBURY. The Rockland Courier-Gazette says the revenue steamer Woodbury, Capt. C. A. Abbey, closed her active winter cruising Saturday at midnight. Her work alone has aggregated more than that accomplished by the balance of the entire fleet of the U. S. Revenue Marine by a large percentage. The steamer will soon go on the ways at Portland to receive repairs, necessitated by her hard battlings with the ice. We regret to learn that Lt. Butts, of her staff, is seriously sick; also to know that Capt. Abbey, himself, is troubled with an affection of the eyes, a recurrence of an old trouble, the result of which may compel him to remove from this station—a step which would be regretted by his many friends.

OBITUARY. The Piscataquis Observer says: Our community was made sad on Monday last by the sudden death of Mr Charles E. Wyman by pneumonia, after an illness of about a week. On the previous Monday he took a sudden cold, and during the night complained of severe pains in the region of the chest. Dr Buck was called in the morning, but the disease had assumed such a form that it seemed impossible to check it, and soon both lungs were congested. He continued to fail under the best medical treatment and care procurable, but the case appeared to be a hopeless one at the outset, and at about 9 o'clock A. M. Monday, he breathed his last. Mr Wyman was the oldest son of Mr. Daniel Wyman, of Foxcroft, and was very well known throughout this section and in Bangor and Boston. For a few years he carried on the drug and apothecary business in Foxcroft, but sold out, since which time he has assisted his father-in-law, Mr. J. B. Mayo, who carries on a large business in Foxcroft. The young widow, who is almost heart-broken over the sudden demise of her husband, and the stricken parents and other connections of the deceased have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community. His age was 34 years and 10 months. His funeral occurred Wednesday afternoon at his late residence, and was attended by a large number of relatives and sympathizing friends.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mrs Woolson's Lectures.

The lectures now being delivered by Mrs. Abba Goold Woolson steadily increase in interest, and are listened to on each Tuesday and Friday of their occurrence by a most appreciative audience. The influences of ancient history on modern literature is her general theme, and for this purpose she takes us back to the very morning of history, to the building of the great cities Babylon and Nineveh. She dwells briefly but vividly on the splendid reigns of the Assyrian kings, who built and occupied these cities, extending their power from thence into far Judea. The sufferings and humiliation of the conquered Jews are strongly portrayed.

The recent explorations in these most ancient cities, and the discoveries of archaeologists are graphically told, and as we follow her narration we can almost see the treasures revealed in these vast, open mounds, the palaces, the statues, the bas-reliefs, the numberless tablets of alabaster inscribed in the cuniform characters, a language forgotten for centuries. It is interesting to know that as modern scholars gradually master these strange inscriptions, many startling proofs of the truth of the Old Testament history are brought to light.

Leaving Assyria where is the root of our fair tree of English literature, she shows us Persia in its later day of victory and magnificence. This lecture was like a brilliant word painting, from its introductory description of Persia as it is, a tropical garden of the world, until we stood in imagination among the ruins of Persepolis, the pleasure palaces of Darius and Xerxes, amid marble columns where only the winds of the lonely mountains have echoed for a thousand years.

The lecture of Friday afternoon brought us to ancient Greece, and as the sources of our literature were kept in view she dwelt more on the Greece of fable and mythology than of mere history. The Gods and legends of Greece have been the fountain of the world's poetry and art. Mrs. Woolson's conversational style causes her hearers to forget that they are listening to a lecture, and her own earnest enthusiasm is contagious.

Three lectures of the course of eight still remain, in which she takes up Grecian and Roman themes, bringing us to the landing of Caesar on British soil.

The Georgia Minstrels.

This evening, at the Opera House, Bishop's Georgia Minstrels will appear. In addition to the talent already announced, Sergeant W. H. Simms, formerly of Haverly's and Callender's Colored Minstrels, will appear in his lightning Zouave drill. He has but lately returned from Europe. The military band belonging to the troupe will make a street parade at noon.

Esmeralda.

The sale of seats for "Esmeralda" will open at the Opera House this morning. This beautiful play will be given at the Opera House next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and we expect to see a very large demand for tickets. Those who intend to go should remember the Margaret Mather sale and not "get left" this time. Prices are as usual.

Handel Concert.

We learn the tickets to the Handel concert continue to meet with good sale and it is hoped that the participants will be greeted by an audience of large numbers. Our [illegible] should make the concert by their attendance a rousing financial success and we are sure that the Handels will give an entertainment which will be of a high order of excellence.

WELCOME TO REV. MR. PECK.

Pleasant Reception at the Universalist Vestry.

The members of the Universalist Society and their friends assembled in the spacious vestry of the church last evening to tender a reception to their new pastor, Rev. E. E. Peck, and his agreeable wife. The reception was designed as an occasion on which a cordial welcome could be extended to Mr. Peck and his family and also that they and the members of the parish might mutually become acquainted.

The vestry was filled to overflowing with a large and pleasant gathering. Shortly after eight o'clock the reception commenced and the large company formed in procession, marched up one of the aisles and shook hands and exchanged greetings with Mr. Peck and his wife.

After all present had made the acquaintance of their new pastor the party became seated. Hon. Henry Lord, as master of ceremonies, made brief remarks and called upon Judge E. C. Brett, who delivered an eloquent and appropriate address of welcome. Rev. Amory Battles, who for more than a score of years was the beloved pastor of the Society, made some very earnest and interesting remarks. Rev. F. T. Hazlewood was called upon and in behalf of the clergymen of Bangor extended a hearty welcome to Mr. Peck in a very excellent address. Mr. Lord read letters of regrets from Revs. G. W. Field and G. B. Ilsley of their inability to be present and stated that several other clergymen had expressed to him their sorrow that they could not be in attendance. Mr. Joseph B. Ayer, of the Reform Club, also made remarks and welcomed the pastor in behalf of their organization. Rev Mr. Peck then responded in feeling terms, expressed his gratification at this manifestation of their good will and spoke with zeal of the relations he had now commenced with them. A fervent prayer was then offered by Rev. Mr. Battles.

An elaborate musical programme had been arranged but it was greatly curtailed on account of the length of the previous exercises. The regular choir, embracing Mrs. Shaw, Miss Sellers, Mr. Patten and Mr. Roberts, sang "God shall charge His Angel Legions." A solo, "Some Day," was then rendered by Mrs. Shaw, after which a piano and organ duet, "Palm Branches," was played by Miss Woodman and Mr. Patten. Refreshments were then passed around, and cake and ice cream were served in bountiful quantities, being enjoyed with hearty relish. The exercises came to a close with Gounod's "Serenade," on the violin and piano, by Messrs. Charles and George Cushing. The occasion was, in all respects, very enjoyable and was an augury that the pastorate, the threshold of which Mr. Peck has just entered upon, will be highly successful and prosperous.

By lack of open air exercise, and the want of sufficient care in the matter of diet, the whole physical mechanism often becomes impaired during the winter. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the proper remedy to take in the spring of the year to purify the blood, invigorate the system, excite the liver to action, and restore the healthy tone and vigor.

It was once said of England, the mistress of the ocean, that "her sails whiten every sea." The propulsion of vessels by steam, instead of wind as heretofore, has plucked a feather from the plumage of that aerial metaphor. One of the most formidable of English ironclads, or war vessels, is called "The Destroyer." This floating monster of destruction is claimed to be absolutely impenetrable. All efforts to pierce her steel coat, must, we are told, fail. Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator, on the other hand, never fails to cure the most aggravated and distressing cases of heart disease.

AFTER THE STORM

BY AUGUSTA MOORE.

The willows weep along the shore
The sea makes answering moan,
And tenderly the low wind grieves,
While whispering to the shuddering leaves
Of the poor widow's son

O still and fair he lieth there
His smile is calm and sweet
He heedeth not the shining waves
That curl about his feet,
And he heedeth not the dusky wings
That round his forehead beat

Oh! will they tear that forehead fair?
Away! dark birds, away!
Why cometh none to rescue him?
God guard his holy clay!

Far out the sea is grey with mist,
With gleams of foam shot through
And from the mist comes, silently
A dark swift boat to view

The willows wave their leafy hands
Low leaning o'er the tide,
And gentle winds and waves conspire
The rower's search to guide

They touch the shore their hopes are o'er
Their anxious search is done
And solemnly they bear away
The beautiful beloved clay,
Of the poor widow's son

DORA'S TRIAL

BY ELLA W THOMPSON

I do wish said Mrs Prudence Hall holding her darning needle in mid air for a moment over the coarse, blue sock she was mending I do wish you could see your way clear to marrying Seth Hallett He wants you the worst kind, and he'd be such a good provider '

But I don't like him well enough Prudy, and I want something besides meat and drink and two calico dresses a year

Mrs Prudence Hall had sprained her ankle and was forced sorely against her will to sit day after day in an upper chamber with a terrible consciousness that everything about the farm was relapsing into chaos and old night, for want of her oversight Her pretty sister Dora had come to stay with her; but she was only a child you know '

There are two kinds of love in this world said Mrs Hall, after a pause, in which she had been taking counsel with herself whether Dora was old enough to be talked to on such matters at all and it flashed upon her that 'the child' was nearly twenty years old Perhaps you like Seth well enough to marry him only you don't know it

Tell me about the two kinds of love," said Dora innocently "I thought love was love the world over '

I have never known but one kind, I think Dora When I married David Hall he was the most well to-do young man in these parts and we never had a quarrel while he lived He was a good practical sort of man and he never asked me to do anything unreasonable

What if he had asked Dora

Well I guess I could have argued him out of it But there is a kind of love that will drive women through fire and water It makes them throw themselves away on poor shiftless men that will never provide for them or their children and they know it as well as anybody else does It is the greatest wonder to me why such a useless feeling should ever have been created "

Dora had bent low over her work to hide her roguish smiles at her sister's discourse but at this point she fixed her deep gray eye on Prudence not smiling, but simply earnest

Such love brings happiness sometimes I suppose said Dora

Next to never said Prudence with great decision We ain't made to be happy and anything that's too good always leaves a bad taste in the mouth Comfort's a bird in the hand and you don't gain anything by letting fly on the chance of happiness

Did you ever know any one about here Prudence that threw herself away for love? It seems to me they won't look at a man unless he has a house and farm all ready for them

That's where they're right said Prudence You are rather given to high flying notions and it's time you found out that bread don't grow ready buttered Yes I did know one girl who was pretty and smart and had no end of chances to get married (I think my David courted her a spell but he never would own it) and she would have that shiftless critter Joe Raymond who never could make one hand wash the other Even when she was a dying she pretended that she had been happy and wouldn't have done no other way if she had it to do over again

Was she our Joe's mother?' asked Dora quickly

'Yes she sure and when she died we took him to bring up and work on the farm He's more than paid his way, but he's a rolling stone like his father, and won't never come to anything I forgot tell you—he's going to-morrow

Going to-morrow! cried Dora with a great start I thought his time wasn't out for another month

Well it ain't quite rightly till he's twenty one but he was in such a hurry to be off, he I gave him the last month

Then fell silence upon them

The two women had the same father and mother though a score of years lay between them Prudence had been born the early married life of her parents, when they were struggling with a stony New England farm and there was work for even baby hands The lines of duty and care were deeply engraved in her pinched face which yet beamed with a kindly common sense But Dora had come to her mother late in life as an old tree sometimes blossoms into loveliness after every one has forgotten it Her little feet had walked in easy paths and Prudence hovered over her like a mother

She sat now by the open fire bending her graceful head over some delicate work that Prudence would never have found time for her red dress and the flickering firelight made her a picture too lovely for that dull room

Prudence she said suddenly as this is Joe's last night I think I'll go down and say good bye to him

You might call him up here

No I think I will go myself

I believe I haven't ever told you, Dora how much you pleased me by giving up that childish way of going on with him that you used to have It did very well for you to be fond of each other when you were little but of course it is out of the question now

It might have been the red dress and the firelight that brought such a vivid flush to Dora's cheek as she listened and turned away She ran lightly down stairs and opened the door of the great farm kitchen

A young man sat by the dull fire looking into it as one looks into the eyes of an enemy before the fight—an over grown farmer boy in home-made clothes with nothing about him to fall in love with least of all for the brilliant little figure that stood waiting for him to look up He was too intent on his own thoughts to notice her till she went swiftly across the room and taking his head between her soft hands turned his face face up to hers

Joe bad boy, were you going away without letting me know?'

The hard lines of his face softened and brightened under her gaze till one would not have known him for the same man

I thought that I should not see you tonight he said

You know better you know I would have crept through the key hole for one little last minute with you "

How long will you wait for me, Dora?" Will you come back

If it were seven years, think how long it would be '

If you loved me as you make me believe said Dora you would not go away at all, but would work here till you could build a little house, and then we would rough it together.'

No, little Dora, that is not my kind of love, my mother tried that, and she lived a slave's life '

' Dora, Dora!" called Prudence from up stairs, "what on earth are you doing down there?"

' I must go, now, I must, truly," said Dora as she felt herself locked in arms that would not give way. "If I live without you for seven years I shall be a homely old maid, and you will not thank me for waiting for you "

He put her away then, and looked at her curiously, as if he had never thought of her prettiness before "Do you know what your name means?" he asked, earnestly. "I saw it in a paper, that 'Theodora' means 'Gift of God,' and you have been just that to me If I had never seen you, I should never have had a notion above a day's work and a night's sleep I will write whenever I have any luck, and come home on New Year's eve, when I do come, and if you wear this red dress I shall know you have waited for me

'I think I shall live to wear it when you come home, if it is seven times seven years, Joe for women are very hard to kill," said Dora, slowly disappearing from the kitchen

"What have you been doing all this time?" asked Prudence, severely

' I was only giving Joe some very good advice "

' Well, I hope he'll profit by it '

'So do I ' said Dora heartily

'Tis as easy to say seven years as one, and we read of Jacob's seven years' service for Rachel, which seemd but as one day for the love that he bore her Rachel's feelings are not thought worthy to be mentioned in the Holy Writ, but if her love was like Dora's every day seemed seven years And here in a nut shell lies the difference between a man's love and a woman's

Jacob had the sheep to mind and he did mind them uncommonly well, Joe went to seek his fortune in new scenes, and only thought of Dora when he had nothing else to do The poet thought he had set a hard task for men when he said

"Learn to labor and to wait "

Till her lover went away, Dora had never cared to ask herself whether she were a child or a woman Sunshine had been plenty with her and she had easily sugared and gilded the plain things that farm life afforded to her.

Before the first year came to an end, she felt that she should soon arrive at a patriarchal age if she did not do something to kill the time which died so hard on her hands

Teach school ' I guess not ' said her father when she broached her plan to him You ain't starvin' yet and if you want some new furbelows just say so and not come at it slantin' ways like that

I don't want anything father but there is so little for me to do at home

Nonsense In my time gals was always full of business Can't you make sheets and pillow cases and get ready to be married? who knows but somebody 'll ask ye one of these days?

Waal, waal folks can't always have their d'rathers in this world I ain't willin and that's the end on't '

But this was not the end on't, and Dora easily obtained a school She developed a governing talent which charmed the committee men and the congenial labor in the company of little children took her out of herself and infused new life into her hope deferred

Every week she walked to the post office three miles away to ask for a letter going in with a bright flush on either cheek and coming out pale and dull eyed after the stab of disappointment. I wonder that people in the country are so anxious to be postmaster, if they only knew it they are actors in more tragedies than any member of a theatrical stock company Much sealed happiness passes through their hands but they have to refuse many a Mariana in the Moated Grange?—weary women who reach a hand out of their lives for a letter and draw it back empty

It was far into the second year before Joe's first letter came It was surely a fanciful and foolish thing for a schoolmistress to do but Dora carried it to her own little room and put on her red dress before she read Joe's letter

Joe was working in the mines in Colorado His luck had not yet come to nuggets at least, but hard work and sober living were slowly giving him the advantage over the other miners He was never so well and he loved her better than all the world!

Dora lived on this letter for many weeks, and she set 'Colorado' for a copy so often to her scholars that they will write that word better than any other to their dying day

Letters came oftener as years drew on, sometimes Joe was up in the world, sometimes down, once his carefully hoarded gold was stolen from him and he had to begin all over again, but this was nothing to a long illness in which a friend wrote to Dora as soon as Joe was out of danger Then Dora envied the doves their wings

New Year's day was the hardest of all to bear She could not help a strong pressure of excitement when she put on the red dress which grew more and more old fashioned, and watched the sun go down on the road which Joe must travel when he should come home The next morning she fitted her shoulders sadly to the burden of another year

One young farmer after another found his way to the old farm house on Sunday evenings and Dora pushed them down an inclined plane of discouragement so gently that they scarcely knew whether they had meant to court her or not It was not the least of her trials to meet the entreaties of her mother and the rough arguments of her father when one or two more persistent suitors would take nothing less than 'no' for their answer

Dora could give no reason for repeated refusals to marry, only she loved no one well enough—a reason which would be all sufficient if parents remained immortally young but it loses its weight after sixty.

As the the seventh year drew to a close Dora's heart beat light within her Joe had mentioned seven years, as if he meant to come home then at any rate She wore out the first day of the glad New Year with busy cares till late in the afternoon, when an old man spent with much walking stopped to rest himself in the farm house kitchen Prudence bestirred herself to give him a hearty luncheon and when he was warmed and fed he began to talk of his travels. He had been to seek his fortune all over the west, and never finding it had come back to die at home He mentioned Colorado and Denver and when Dora found herself alone with him for a moment, she said ' Did you ever see Joseph Raymond in Denver?

Joe Raymond? Oh, yes! knew him well, lived with him right on the same h His wife was a real good cook, couldn't be beat nowhere in them parts

You say he was married?

To be sure a right smart feller and mighty fond of his wife Women are scarce out there '

Prudence came in and the old man went on his way all unconscious of the great stone he had cast into the still waters of Dora's heart

What's the matter? said Prudence You're as white as a sheet '

Dora's only answer was to start out of the house and run, as for her life down the frozen orchard path by which she could gain upon and overtake this terrible old man She might have said, with ' holy Herbert,

> My thoughts are all a case of knives
> Wounding my heart
> With scattered smart —

only mystery must have time to crystalize into a memory before it takes the form of poetry She stood before the old man at the turning bare headed and breathless ' How did the Joe Raymond look that you lived with?' gasped Dora

"I never said Joe Raymond,'" said the old man, peevishly, 'I said, 'Jim Raymond They had a big boy named Joe who— but Dora was off again before he could finish the sentence

She ran back through the orchard giving thanks with all her heart that she had not suffered herself to be persuaded of Joe's faithlessness on one hearing Her feeling of grateful awe, as if she had escaped from sudden death, kept her from mourning much over the passing away of the seventh anniversary of Joe's departure, with no sign of his return

His letters had wholly ceased and there was nothing left for Dora but to possess her soul with patience. When another New Year drawned upon her, she put on the old red dress more from habit than any gleam of hope in her heart, and did not care to look in the glass In the twilight she walked slowly down the orchard path, and leaned on the gate that opened into the road

Suddenly a man sprang out from behind the wall "Theodora, my 'gift of God '" he said, and Dora, though she recognized no mark of the lover who had left her eight years before, felt that no other knew that pass-word, and suffered herself to rest silently in his arms in the ineffable content that comes after long waiting

When Joe and Dora went into the house and she looked at him by candlelight, her heart almost misgave her, his luxuriant beard and the manly assurance of his manners were not at all like her Joe of beloved memory, and a terrible barrier seemed to rise up between them, while Prudence remained in the room with her company manners, which sat more awkwardly upon her than her Sunday gown.

When Dora tiptoed softly by her sister's door at a very late hour that night, Prudence was lying awake for her. "Don't tell me," she said, "that you've been waiting for that Joe Raymond all this time!"

"I won't tell you, if you don't want to hear it," said Dora

' Do you know whether he came home any better off than when he went away?"

' I really haven't thought to ask him," said Dora carelessly Prudence groaned and turned her face to the wall

Joe waited only till the next day to tell Mrs Hall the story of his success, which looked very moderate in his travelled eyes, but seemed a noble fortune to her homely ideas.

' I never thought before" said Dora's father at the wedding, "that a woman could keep a secret and I guess it ain't much more common than snow in dog days "

"How long would you have waited for me?' whispered Joe in Dora's ear

' Forever," said Dora solemnly

And Mrs Prudence, Hall, as she overheard the word, thank her stars that Dora's foolish actions had not wrecked her at last on a poverty stricken marriage

HOME COMFORT.

After a Rainy Ride, a Country Physician Tells What He Thinks of Some People.

"I wish to gracious some people would learn when they need a doctor and when they don't," exclaimed Doctor E—— as he entered his house in a cosey little village in the interior of the State of New York, after a tedious night ride of many miles "I have been down among the mountains to see a man, who the messenger said, was very sick and not likely to live till morning, unless he had immediate help, and found him suffering from a rather sharp attack of colic, which his family might have relieved in ten minutes, if they had a grain of sense and two or three simple remedies in the house But no they must remain ignorant as pigs, and when the least ache or pain takes them, send for a doctor, whether they ever pay him or not "

' Why, Doctor, what kind of simple remedies, as you call them, do you expect people to keep in the house?' asked his wife, as she poured him a cup of hot tea

' In this case, answered the Doctor, "if they had only put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on the man's stomach he would have been all right in an hour and saved me a dreary ride

In all ordinary complaints it cures at once

All diseases are combated from the system by what may be roughly called expulsion or extraction or by a union of the two processes Benson's Plaster promotes both. It incites the torpid organs to act, and sends its healing, soothing influence through the myriad pores of the skin All other plasters oblige the patient to wait They give him hope for to-morrow. Benson's plaster gives him help to-day Which is better, do you think? Buy the CAPCINE and keep it in the house Price 25 cents

Terrible Suffering.

Kidney and Bladder Complaints of Many Years Duration—His Word as Good as Gold—Case of City Assessor Francis Gomard, 89 Sumner St., Lowell, Mass.

"His word is as good as a bank note at any bank in Lowell and I know it," was the opinion of a well known citizen in speaking of City Assessor Francis Gomard Your reporter found Mr Gomard at his pleasant home, which, with many others, adorns Sumner street and fronts the charming park of South Common Mr Gomard said, "I had been, as many of my friends in Lowell know a great sufferer from kidney and urinary troubles for a long time My physician said it was the result of diseased kidneys and enlargement of the prostate gland I had suffered terribly and although my doctor's treatment had been the best which this city afforded, I got no better I said finally, 'Doctor, it's no use You have done all that is in your power to do, I know that, but I must get help from some other source or die ' Finally I was induced to try Dr Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, a medicine which had been recommended very highly for kidney diseases. I received help at once It has acted like a charm with me Why so? Dr Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is an honest preparation, and I know it. I didn't think anything would help me, but this has given me better health than any medicine ever prescribed for me. I have recommended it to ever so many of my friends in the city of Lowell, and with the same result. They think there is nothing like Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY "

What Mr Gomard says can be depended upon, as any one acquainted with the gentleman knows
